Uncertainty, Threat, and International Security

Implications for Southeast Asia

Edited By Ivan Savic, Zachary C. Shirkey

Series: Rethinking Asia and International Relations

The rise of China is changing the strategic landscape globally and regionally. How states respond to potential threats posed by this new power arrangement will be crucial to international relations for the coming decades. This book builds on existing realist and rationalist concepts of balancing, bandwagoning, commitment problems, and asymmetric information to craft explanations about how states respond when faced with potential threats. Specifically, the book explores the role different types of uncertainty play in potential balancing situations. Particular focus is paid to the nature of the rising state's actions, the balance of forces, and the value of delay.

Comparative Federalism and Covid-19

Combating the Pandemic

Edited By Nico Steytler

Series: Routledge Studies in Federalism and Decentralization

This comprehensive scholarly book on comparative federalism and the Covid-19 pandemic is written by some of the world's leading federal scholars and national experts. The value of the book lies in understanding how the Covid-19 pandemic affected federal dynamics and how it may have changed them, as well as providing useful lessons for how to combat such pandemics in federal countries in the future. It will be of great interest to students and scholars of politics and international relations, comparative federalism, and disaster management.

21st Century Cooperation

Regional Public Goods, Global Governance, and Sustainable Development

Edited By Antoni Esteveadoral, Louis Goodman

This book explains the importance of regional public goods for sustainable development and to show why they are particularly important in the context of 21st century international relations. There is broad agreement among scholars and policy makers that regional public goods are important for binding nations together to form regional alliances and for enhancing capacities for economic, political and social development. By presenting a new and original data set and original essays by renowned scholars, this book aims to lay the foundation for what will become an increasingly important focus for both economic development and international relations.

Policy-Making Processes and the European Constitution

A Comparative Study of Member States and Accession Countries

Edited By Thomas König, Simon Hug

Series: Routledge/ECPR Studies in European Political Science

This new volume presents a wealth of fresh data documenting and analyzing the different positions taken by governments in the development of the European Constitution. It examines how such decisions have substantial effects on the sovereignty of nation states and on the lives of citizens, independent of the ratification of a constitution.

Climate Change and Natural Disasters

Transforming Economies and Policies for a Sustainable Future

Edited By Vinod Thomas

The start of the new millennium will be remembered for deadly climate-related disasters - the great floods in Thailand in 2011, Super Storm Sandy in the United States in 2012, and Typhoon Haiyan in the Philippines in 2013, to name a few. What is causing the increase in natural disasters and what effect does it have on the economy? Vinod Thomas proposes that economic growth will become sustainable only if governments, political actors, and local communities combine natural disaster prevention and controlling climate change into national growth strategies. When considering all types of capital, particularly human capital, climate action can drive economic growth, rather than hinder it.

Why International Organizations Hate Politics

Depoliticizing the World

Edited By Marieke Louis, Lucile Maertens

Series: Global Institutions

Building on the concept of depoliticization, this book provides a first systematic analysis of International Organizations (IO) apolitical claims. It shows that depoliticization sustains IO everyday activities while allowing them to remain engaged in politics, even when they pretend not to. For IO scholars and students, this book sheds new light on IO politics and it will also be of interest to researchers working in the fields of political science, international relations, international political sociology, international political economy, history, law, sociology, anthropology and geography as well as IO practitioners.

Domestic Politics and Norm Diffusion in International Relations

Ideas do not float freely

Edited By Thomas Risse

Series: Routledge/UACES Contemporary European Studies

This book collects Thomas Risse's most important articles together in a single volume. Covering a wide range of issues – the end of the Cold War, transatlantic relations, the "democratic peace", human rights, governance in areas of limited statehood, Europeanization, European identity and public spheres, most recently comparative regionalism – it is testament to the breadth and excellence of this highly respected International Relations scholar's work.

European Union Competition Policy versus Industrial Competitiveness

Stringent Regulation and its External Implications

Edited By Hikaru Yoshizawa

Series: Globalisation, Europe, and Multilateralism

The book examines whether EU competition policy is applied fairly and consistently to EU and non-EU firms despite persistent political pressure from member states for a relaxation of the rules and deals with the dilemma of regional organisations in the global political economy. It will be of key interest to scholars and students of European Union studies, EU competition law and policy, EU external action and more broadly to global governance, international political economy and international relations.

Germany's Foreign Policy Towards Poland and the Czech Republic

Ostpolitik Revisited

Edited By Karl Cordell, Stefan Wolff

Series: Routledge Advances in European Politics

This is a new exploration of how the events of the twentieth century still cast a shadow over relations between Germany, Poland and the Czech Republic. Identifying the key actors and factors, Cordell and Wolff examine the long-standing continuity in the norms and values that underpin German foreign policy and explore the issues of borders, territory, identities, minorities and population transfers.

Bitcoin and Beyond

Cryptocurrencies, Blockchains, and Global Governance

Edited By Malcolm Campbell-Verduyn

Series: RIPE Series in Global Political Economy

What opportunities and challenges do Blockchain technologies pose for global governance? Who are empowered and disempowered by these technologies? This volume addresses these questions by integrating critical and constructivist perspectives with approaches from a range of disciplines. It enhances interdisciplinary conversations and mutual learning and provides academics, policymakers, the general public with a critically informed understanding of the implications that Bitcoin, Cryptocurrencies, and Blockchain technologies pose for the governance of a rapidly changing global political economy.

Sincerity in Politics and International Relations

Edited By Sorin Baiasu, Sylvie Loriaux

This work examines concept of sincerity in politics and international relations in order to discuss what we should expect of politicians, within what parameters should they work, and how their decisions and actions could be made consistent with morality. Each chapter will be focused on a contemporary issue in politics and international relations, including corruption, public hypocrisy, cynicism, trust, security, policy formulation and decision-making, political apology, public reason, denial and self-deception, and will argue against the background of a Kantian view of sincerity as unconditional.

Politics as a Science

A Prolegomenon

Edited By Philippe C. Schmitter, Marc Blecher

Series: Conceptualising Comparative Politics

In Politics as a Science, two of the world's leading authorities on Comparative Politics, Philippe C. Schmitter and Marc Blecher, provide a lively introduction to the concepts and framework to study and analyze politics. Schmitter and Blecher keep the text broadly conceptual and theoretical to convey their vision of the sprawling subject of politics.

They map the process in which researchers try to specify the goal of the trip, some of the landmarks likely to be encountered en route, and the boundaries that will circumscribe the effort. This book is an ideal introduction for anyone interested in, or studying, Comparative Politics.

Russia–EU Relations and the Common Neighborhood

Coercion vs. Authority

Edited By Irina Busygina

Examining Russia-EU relations in terms of the forms and types of power tools they use, this book argues that the main source of tensions lies in deep differences in their preferences for the international status quo; the nature of the Russian state explains its routine use of coercion, while as a weak federal union, the EU is 'doomed' to use tools based on authority.

The Boundaries of Democracy

A Theory of Inclusion

Edited By Ludvig Beckman

This book provides a general theory of democratic inclusion for the present world. It presents an original contribution to our understanding of the democratic ideal by explaining how democratic inclusion can apply to individuals in a variety of contexts: the workplace, social clubs, religious institutions, the family and, of course, the state. The book explores the problem of democratic inclusion, what it means to be subject to de facto authority, how this conception translates into legal systems, etc. It will be of interest to scholars and researchers of politics, especially political theory and democracy.

Secrecy and Methods in Security Research

A Guide to Qualitative Fieldwork

Edited By Marieke De Goede, Esmé Bosma, Polly Pallister-Wilkins

This book analyses the challenges of secrecy in security research, and develops a set of methods to navigate, encircle and work with secrecy. It offers students, PhD researchers and senior scholars a rich toolkit of methods and best-practice examples for ethically appropriate ways of navigating secrecy. The book will be of interest to students of research methods, critical security studies and International Relations in general.

Federalism and Regional Policy in Contemporary Russia

Edited By Andrey Starodubtsev

How do Russian leaders balance the need to decentralize governance in a socially and politically complex country with the need to guarantee political control of the state? Asking clear, direct and theoretically informed questions about the relationship between federalism, decentralisation and authoritarianism, Andrey Starodubtsev explores the political survival of authoritarian leaders, the determinants of policy formulation and theories of federalism and decentralization to construct new frameworks for studying territorial governance across a range of authoritarian political systems.

US Nation-Building in Afghanistan

 Edited By Conor Keane

US Nation-Building in Afghanistan

CONOR KEANE

Why has the US so dramatically failed in Afghanistan since 2001? Dominant explanations have ignored the bureaucratic divisions and personality conflicts inside the US state. This book rectifies this weakness in commentary on Afghanistan by exploring the significant role of these divisions in the US's difficulties in the country that meant the battle was virtually lost before it even began. The main objective of the book is to deepen readers understanding of the impact of bureaucratic politics on nation-building in Afghanistan, focusing primarily on the Bush Administration.
