Critical Theory: The Basics

Martin Shuster

Critical Theory: The Basics brings clarity to a topic that is confusingly bandied about with various meanings today in popular and academic culture. This book introduces especially the core program of the first-generation of the Frankfurt School and shows how this program remains crucial to understanding the problems, ideologies, and systems of the modern world. With suggestions for further reading, this book is an ideal starting point for anyone seeking an accessible but robust introduction to the richness and complexity of this tradition and to its continuing importance today.

Digital Knowledge

A Philosophical Investigation

J. Adam Carter
Series: Routledge Studies in Epistemology
Big data, machine learning and mobile communications are rapidly changing the volume and nature of information we receive. Such transformations have massive implications for what we can know: Knowledge itself is increasingly digitised. Digital Knowledge: A Philosophical Investigation is the first book to fully explain and examine digital knowledge: what it is, how it compares to received theories of knowledge and where it is going.

Philosophy, Expertise, and the Myth of Neutrality

Edited by Mirko Farina, Andrea Lavazza
Series: Routledge Studies in Contemporary Philosophy
This volume proposes a reconceptualization of expertise and calls for the development of a new contextual and action-oriented notion of expertise, which is attentive to axiological values, intellectual virtues, and moral qualities. The chapters assess the idea of whether possessing epistemic authority can automatically make someone’s assertions more grounded than others. They evaluate not only the epistemological implications of this idea, but also reflect on its ethical, socio-cultural, and political consequences. This interdisciplinary framework adopts more inclusive and representative decisions that can improve the perceived neutrality of experts’ decisions.

The Epistemic Injustice of Genocide Denialism

Melanie Altanian
Series: Routledge Studies in Epistemology
This book rethinks the relationship between dignity, truth and memory in relation to genocide denial by adopting the framework of epistemic injustice. This framework performs two functions. First, it introduces normative vocabulary into genocide scholarship through which we can gain a better understanding of the normative impacts of genocide denial when it is institutionalized and systematic. Second, it enriches current scholarship on epistemic injustice with a further, underexplored case study. By focusing on the case of Turkey’s denialism of the Armenian genocide, the book shows the consequences of this kind of epistemic injustice for the victim group and society as a whole.

Political Humility

The Limits of Knowledge in Our Partisan Political Climate

Blake Roeber
This book aims to change the way we think about politics, talk about politics, and vote. It does this in two ways. First, it shows it’s impossible for a Republican, Democrat, or voter in any political party to possess a significant level of knowledge of facts that would help their party secure or maintain political power. It calls this knowledge “political knowledge” and shows how unfeasible it is for anyone to have it. Second, it explains how we might best be politically engaged, given that we have virtually no political knowledge.

Seemings

New Arguments, New Angles

Edited by Kevin McCain, Scott Stapleford, Matthias Steup
Series: Routledge Studies in Epistemology
This volume presents new research on the epistemology of seemings. It features original essays by leading epistemologists on the nature and epistemic import of seemings and intuitions. There are many questions about seemings that have yet to be answered satisfactorily. What kinds of seemings are there? How do seemings justify? Are seemings connected to truth? Do they play a significant role in inquiry? The chapters in this volume offer a range of useful arguments and fresh ideas about seemings, the nature of justification and the nature of inference.

Concepts, Methods and Theory

Edited by M R. X. Dentith

The Cost of Bearing Witness
Secondary Trauma and Self-Care in Fieldwork-Based Social Research

Edited by Nena Močnik, Ahmad Ghouri

The chapters discuss various facets of secondary trauma from different methodological and theoretical perspectives, geographic and historical contexts, and address a wide range of questions spanning from recent complex topics to semi-historical events and future concerns causing traumatic anxiety. Descartes’s Moral Perfectionism

Frans Svensson
Series: Routledge Studies in Seventeenth-Century Philosophy
This book offers a novel interpretation of Descartes’s moral philosophy. It argues that Descartes’s ethics constitutes a form of moral perfectionism. In the Cartesian picture, we satisfy this requirement of perfection by using our free will well in all our conduct, something which is also necessary for obtaining happiness for ourselves. To be guaranteed happiness, we need to acquire the virtue of generosity, which entails being attentive in one’s thought to various truths about oneself and about the world. Descartes leaves room for the presence of passions in life and for acknowledging that even fully-virtuous persons’ lives may differ in their degrees of overall perfection.

Human Freedom in the Age of AI

Filippo Santoni de Sio
Series: Routledge Research in Applied Ethics

This book claims that artificial intelligence (AI) may affect our freedom at work, in our daily life, and in the political sphere. The author provides a philosophical framework to help make sense of and govern the ethical and political impact of AI in these domains. The author claims that it is still possible to promote human freedom in our interactions with AI. This requires designing AI systems that help promote workers' freedom, strengthen human control and responsibility, and foster a free, active, and inclusive democratic participation.

A Phenomenological Analysis of Envy

Michael Robert Kelly
Series: Routledge Studies in Ethics and Moral Theory

This book provides a phenomenological analysis of envy. It proposes a phenomenological analysis of envy that articulates its essentially comparative character according to which we can further incorporate the role of the envier. This approach offers a novel contribution in three ways. First, it develops a notion of two predominant ways in which envy expresses itself: one that is bad for the envied and the other that is bad for the envious. Second, it offers a new defense of the traditional view that envy is bad or vicious. Third, it provides original phenomenological descriptions of differences between envy and covetousness, indignation, emulation, resentment, and jealousy.

Difficult Virtues
An Aristotelian Perspective

Howard J. Curzer

This book describes 8 virtues that have proven problematic to virtue ethicalists. Integrity has been the subject of wildly different accounts. Open-mindedness and forgiveness are described in ways that many endorse, but few seek to practice. Accounts of tolerance and civility generally fit only the privileged. Finally, good timing, ambition, and creativity have attracted little attention. Curzer offers novel accounts of all 8 difficult virtues, and demonstrates that they possess the standard features of Aristotelian virtues.

Responsibility Collapses
Why Moral Responsibility is Impossible

Stephen Keshnar

Series: Routledge Studies in Ethics and Moral Theory

Our worldview assumes that people are morally responsible. Our emotions, beliefs, and values assume that a person is responsible for what she thinks and does, and that this is a good thing. This book argues that this worldview is false. It provides arguments for this conclusion that build on the free will and responsibility literatures in original and insightful ways. There is no other book that argues against moral responsibility based on foundationalism, the epistemic condition, and internalism, and shows that these arguments cohere. Its conclusions undermine our commonsense view of the world and the most common philosophical understanding of God, morality, and relationships.

On Immigration and Refugees

Michael Dummett

Series: Routledge Classics

The philosopher Michael Dummett was one of the sharpest and most prominent commentators and campaigners for the fair treatment of immigrants and refugees in Britain and Europe. On Immigration and Refugees was the only book he wrote on the topic and among one of the most eloquent and important reflections on the subject to have been published in many years. With compelling and often moving examples, he points a new way forward for humane thinking and practice about a problem we cannot afford to ignore. This Routledge Classics edition includes a new Foreword by Sarah Fine.

Pacifism as War Abolitionism

Cheyney Ryan

Pacifism as War Abolitionism provides an account of the war system that draws on contemporary sociology, history, and political philosophy. The core of its critique of that system is that war begets war, and hence war will not be ended—even constrained—by finding more principled ways to fight war, as many imagine. War can only be ended by ending the war system, which can only be done nonviolently. This has been the message of pacifism’s great voices like Gandhi, Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., and Dorothy Day. It is the principal message of this book.

An Ethics of Clinical Uncertainty
Lessons from the COVID-19 Pandemic

Mary Ann G. Cutter

Series: Routledge Annals of Bioethics

This book explores the ethical implications of managing uncertainty in clinical decision-making during the COVID-19 pandemic. The COVID-19 pandemic raised unique questions about how we care for each other in medicine. The book addresses four ethical duties related to clinical uncertainty: (1) the duty to advance the welfare of those in clinical medicine, (2) to respect the rights of those in clinical medicine, (3) to promote just access to health care, and (4) to care for one another in clinical medicine. It also aims to aid clinicians and patients in managing clinical uncertainty, and to recognize the ethical duty they have to manage clinical uncertainty.

Fanaticism and the History of Philosophy
Edited by Paul Katsafanas
Series: Rewriting the History of Philosophy
Philosophers, politicians, and critics have decried fanaticism and attempted to define the qualities of the fanatic. Yet despite fanaticism’s role in the history of social discord, conflict, and violence, it remains a relatively neglected topic in the history of philosophy. This outstanding inquiry into the philosophical history of fanaticism spans themes from superstition, enthusiasm and misanthropy to the emotions, purity and the need for certainty. It is a landmark volume for anyone researching and teaching the history of philosophy, particularly ethics and moral philosophy, and the history of ideas.

Varieties of Voluntarism in Medieval and Early Modern Philosophy
Edited by Sonja Schierbaum, Jörn Müller
This book considers different forms of voluntarism developed from the 13th to 18th centuries. By crossing the conventional dividing line between the medieval and early modern periods, the volume draws important new insights on the historical development of voluntarism. The chapters not only consider towering figures of the Middle Ages—Thomas Aquinas, Henry of Gent, William of Ockham, Francisco de Vitoria—and early modern period—Rene Descartes, Thomas Hobbes, Gottfried Wilhelm Leibniz, Samuel Pufendorf—but also engage with less well-known figures such as Peter John Olivi, John of Poulil, Catharine Trotter Cockburn, and Christian August Crusius.

Historical Explanation
An Anti-Causalist Approach
Edited by Gunnar Schumann
Series: Routledge Studies in Contemporary Philosophy
This book is concerned with the appropriate form of explanations in historiography and the social sciences. It combines action theory and philosophy of historiography and develops a theory of teleological explanations of human actions based on late-Wittgensteinian and Ordinary Language Philosophy insights. It pushes back against mainstream views by reviving an anti-causal view of explanation of current and past human actions. The author argues that disciplines that deal with human actions require a teleological or intentional form of explanation. This means that past human actions and their results will have to be explained by reasons of agents, not by causes.
Occasionalism and the Debate about Causation in Early Modern Germany

Christian Henkel

This is the first book to focus on occasionalism in early modern German philosophy. It demonstrates that occasionalism provided a strong foundation for the thought of four important yet underexamined philosophers: Erhard Weigel, Johann Christoph Sturm, Christian Wolff, and Gottfried Ploucquet. The author combines a chronological investigation of four influential and historically connected cases of occasionalism in early modern Germany with a reconstruction of arguments to address specific problems in metaphysics, natural philosophy, philosophy of language, and philosophy of psychology.

The Berlin Antisemitism Controversy

Frederick C. Beiser

After a long struggle, Jewish emancipation was formally completed in Germany in 1871, when Wilhelm I abolished religious discrimination across the entire Reich. Yet the very same decade witnessed a new wave of antisemitism, one more vicious and virulent than anything before. At its centre was what is known as The Berlin Antisemitism Controversy. Beiser sheds much-needed light on an episode whose shockwaves resonate today. It is a superb account of a crucial period of not only German but European and Jewish history and essential reading for anyone interested in the causes and roots of antisemitism in Germany and beyond.
Do Numbers Exist?
A Debate about Abstract Objects

Peter van Inwagen, William Lane Craig

In Do Numbers Exist? William Lane Craig and Peter van Inwagen take opposite sides on whether there are abstract objects, such as numbers and properties. Craig argues that there are no abstract objects, whereas Van Inwagen argues that there are. Their exchange explores various arguments about the existence and nature of abstract objects. They focus especially on whether our ordinary and scientific thought and talk commit us to abstract objects, surveying the options available to us and the objections each faces. The debate covers central problems and methods in metaphysics, and also delves into theological questions raised by abstract objects.

Philosophy of Time: The Basics

Graeme Forbes

What is time? Does it pass? Is the future open? Why do we care? Philosophy of Time: The Basics doesn’t answer these questions. It does give you an opinionated introduction to thinking a bit more deeply about them. Written in a way that assumes no philosophical background from its readers, this book looks at central topics in philosophy of time and shows how they relate to other time-related topics – from theoretical physics (without the maths!) to your own mortality.

The Routledge Handbook of Essence in Philosophy

Edited by Katrin Koslicki, Michael J. Raven

This Handbook surveys the state of the art on essence. Core issues about essence are discussed in 33 chapters written exclusively for this volume by leading experts. They are organized into four parts, each with its own introduction. The volume is accessible enough for students while also providing enough detail for researchers. The Handbook places essence within its historical context and drawing connections to many contemporary areas of philosophy as well as to scholarly work in other disciplines. Essential reading for anyone, whether in or out of academic philosophy, seeking clarification on one of philosophy’s most distinctive and notorious notions.

Causation: The Basics

Stuart Glennan

Causation: The Basics explores questions about what causes are, and how we come to know them, describe them, and put them to use. The book begins with an introduction the history of philosophical thinking about causation, followed by a series of chapters introducing important contemporary accounts of causation.

Should You Choose to Live Forever?
A Debate

Stephen Cave, John Martin Fischer

Are we wise to wish for immortality? What would it mean for each of us as individuals, for society, and for the planet? In this lively and accessible debate, the authors draw on examples from myth and literature as well as new thought experiments. Cave contends that the aspiring immortalist is stuck on the horns of a series of dilemmas, such as boredom and meaningless, or overpopulation and social injustice. Fischer argues that there is a vision of radically longer lives that is both recognizably human and desirable. This book offers both students and experienced philosophers a provocative new guide to a topic of perennial importance.

The Routledge Handbook of Properties

Edited by A.R.J. Fisher, Anna-Sofia Maurin

Questions regarding the existence and nature of properties is one of the oldest topics in philosophy, reaching back to Plato and Aristotle. Today, properties continue to be a core area for study and research. The Routledge Handbook of Properties is an outstanding reference source to the topic and is the first major volume of its kind, containing 40 chapters by an international team of contributors. Essential reading for anyone studying and researching metaphysics, metemetaphysics, and ontology, and also of interest to those in related areas such as philosophy of science, philosophy of language, philosophy of mind, ethics, and aesthetics.
About Haecceity
An Essay in Ontology
Matthew Davidson
Series: Routledge Studies in Metaphysics
This book offers an in-depth and updated examination of the nature of haecceity—that primitive entity which explains why something is distinct from other things. The book begins by exploring different conceptions of haecceity throughout history. The next part defends a view on which haecceities have objects that instantiate them as constituents. Following that, the book considers arguments for and against the existence of haecceities, the epistemology of haecceity, and the distinction between qualitative and non-qualitative properties.

5TH EDITION
Metaphysics
Peter van Inwagen
This book is an introduction to metaphysics. It presupposes no previous acquaintance with philosophy. In addition, the author has enhanced clarity throughout the text with improvements to word choice, sentence structure, and paragraph lucidity. Finally, the Notes and Suggestions for Further Reading at the end of each chapter and the General Bibliography have all been brought up to date.

Hegel and the State

Franz Rosenzweig

Franz Rosenzweig is one of the most significant German Jewish philosophers of the 20th century. Published in German in 1920 and now finally available in English, Hegel and the State helps us understand Hegel’s political and social thought and analyses the intellectual currents that shaped the German state in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. Including a Foreword by Myriam Bienenstock and an Afterword by Axel Honneth, this major work of early 20th-century philosophical and political thought is essential reading for students of Hegel, German Idealism, Jewish philosophy, history of sociology, and intellectual history.

The Formalization of Dialectics

Edited by Elena Ficara, Graham Priest

This book is about the relationship between Hegel’s dialectics and formal logic. It examines the concept of dialectics, its meaning and its use in contemporary thought. The chapters in this volume feature philosophically and historically motivated presentations of formal features of Hegel’s dialectics, critical considerations about the very idea of ‘formalizing dialectics’ and presentations of past attempts to formalize Hegel’s dialectics. This book was originally published as a special issue of History and Philosophy of Logic.

Heidegger’s Alternative History of Time

Emily Hughes, Marilyn Stendera

This book reconstructs Heidegger’s philosophy of time by engaging with his critical analysis of time in the history of Western thought. Heidegger traces out a history that focuses on the conceptualisations of time put forward by Aristotle, Plotinus, Augustine, Kant, Hegel, Bergson and Husserl—an “alternative history of time” that challenges the scientific theories of time that Heidegger himself explicitly criticised, and the way that time has been analysed within contemporary metaphysics. This book sets out what this can tell us about temporality, existence and philosophy as a historical discipline, especially in contrast to the lineage informing the analytic study of time.

The Event of Meaning in Gadamer’s Hermeneutics

Carlo DaVia, Greg Lynch

Series: Routledge Studies in Twentieth-Century Philosophy

This book presents the first detailed treatment of Gadamer’s account of the nature of meaning. The authors argue both that this account is philosophically valuable in its own right and that understanding it sheds new light on his wider hermeneutical project. It will appeal to researchers and advanced students working in hermeneutics, phenomenology, and the philosophy of language.

McDowell and the Hermeneutic Tradition

Edited by Daniel Martin Feige, Thomas J. Spiegel

Series: Routledge Studies in American Philosophy

John McDowell has made important contributions to debates in epistemology, metaethics and philosophy of language, and his readings of Aristotle, Kant, Hegel, and Wittgenstein have proved widely influential. While there are instances in which McDowell draws upon the work of hermeneutic thinkers, the hermeneutic strand of McDowell’s philosophy has not yet been systematically explored in-depth. This volume explores the connections between John McDowell’s philosophy and the hermeneutic tradition. The contributions not only explore the hermeneutical aspects of McDowell’s thought, but also asks how this reading of McDowell can inform the hermeneutical tradition itself.

Consciousness, Time, and Scepticism in Hume’s Thought

Lorne Falkenstein

Series: Routledge Studies in Eighteenth-Century Philosophy

Hume’s philosophical work presents the reader with a perplexing mix of constructive accounts of empirically guided belief and destructive sceptical arguments against all belief. This book reconciles this conflict by showing that Hume intended his scepticism to be remedial. In making this case, the book develops Humean positions upon the work of hermeneutic thinkers, the hermeneutic strand of McDowell’s philosophy and the hermeneutic tradition. The contributions not only explore the hermeneutical aspects of McDowell’s thought, but also asks how this reading of McDowell can inform the hermeneutical tradition itself.
Charles Taylor

Ruth Abbey

Charles Taylor is one of the most influential philosophers in the English-speaking world. In this thought-provoking introduction Ruth Abbey outlines his ideas in a coherent and accessible way. This second edition has been revised, rewritten, and restructured, with a new chapter taking account of Taylor’s contribution to religion and in particular his major book A Secular Age. It also addresses his other works published in the last 20 years. Essential reading for students of philosophy, religion and political theory, and useful to the non-specialist looking for an authoritative guide to Taylor’s large and challenging body of work.

Wittgenstein and Nietzsche

Edited by Shunichi Takagi, Pascal F. Zambito

Series: Routledge Studies in Twentieth-Century Philosophy

This volume brings together essays that explore the intersections between Nietzsche and Wittgenstein from various perspectives. The first group of chapters contextualize explicit references to Nietzsche in Wittgenstein’s writings and clarify their philosophical function. In Part II, the contributors take a philosophical problem as their starting point and show how it can be illuminated by comparing or contrasting Wittgensteinian and Nietzschean arguments and methods. Together the chapters trace Nietzsche’s influence on Wittgenstein’s thought concerning the critique of language, ethics, aesthetics, religion, and philosophical method.

Schelling, Hegel, and the Philosophy of Nature

From Matter to Spirit

Benjamin Berger

Series: Routledge Studies in Nineteenth-Century Philosophy

This book develops an original interpretation of the relationship between Schelling and Hegel. It argues that the difference between these philosophers must be understood in light of their shared commitment to the philosophy of nature and the idea that spirit, or humanity, emerges from the natural world. The author makes a case for the contemporary relevance of German Idealist philosophy of nature by walking the reader through its major themes, motivations, and arguments. The book challenges some of our most basic assumptions about the scope of philosophical inquiry and the relationship between matter, life, and human existence.

The Schopenhauerian Mind

Edited by David Bather Woods, Timothy Stoll

Series: Routledge Philosophical Minds

Arthur Schopenhauer is recognised as a figure of canonical importance to the history of philosophy. He founded his system on an interpretation of Kant’s philosophy, developing an entirely novel and controversial worldview guided by his striking conception of the human will and of art and beauty. The Schopenhauerian Mind is an outstanding collection that explores Schopenhauer’s ideas, texts, influences, and legacy. 38 chapters cover all the key areas of his philosophy, as well as fields omitted in previous studies. Essential reading for students of nineteenth-century philosophy, Continental philosophy and philosophy of art and aesthetics.

Fichte on Free Will and Predestination

Kienhow Goh

Series: Routledge Studies in Nineteenth-Century Philosophy

The book explains Fichte’s position on free will and predestination, including its rationale and significance. It argues that Fichte affirms both free will and predestination and explains how he purports to do so without contradiction. The book presents Fichte’s position as a form of compatibilism that has not yet been explored in the literature. The book also provides an overview of Fichte’s philosophical system—the so-called “Doctrine of Science”—with the aim of contextualizing his theory of free agency and destiny. In doing so, it sheds light on how consideration of these issues in turn shapes the system.

The Concept of Property in Kant, Fichte, and Hegel

Freedom, Right, and Recognition

Jacob Blumenfeld

Series: Routledge Studies in Nineteenth-Century Philosophy

This book provides a comprehensive account of the role of property in German Idealism. It puts the concept of property in the center of the philosophical systems of Kant, Fichte, and Hegel and shows how property remains tied to their conceptions of freedom, right, and recognition. The book also formulates a normative theory of property rooted in practical reason, mutual recognition, and social freedom. This relational theory of property, inspired by German Idealism, brings a fresh angle to contemporary property theory. Additionally, it provides crucial philosophical background to 19th century debates on private property, inequality, labor, socialism, capitalism, and the state.
Between Wittgenstein and Weil
Comparisons in Philosophy, Religion, and Ethics

Edited by Jack Manzi
Series: Routledge Studies in Twentieth-Century Philosophy

This volume explores the relationship between the philosophical thought of Simone Weil and Ludwig Wittgenstein. The contributions shed light on how reading Weil can inform our understanding of Wittgenstein, and vice versa. The chapters cover different aspects of Weil's and Wittgenstein's philosophy including their religious thought and their views on ethics and meta-philosophy. Between Wittgenstein and Weil will be of interest to scholars and advanced students working in 20th-century philosophy, philosophy of religion, philosophy of language, and the history of moral philosophy.

Truth: The Basics is a concise and engaging introduction to philosophical theories about the nature of truth. The two authors – leading philosophers in this field – build the book around a single question: what, if anything, is common to all truths, which makes them true? The book explores five important answers (theories) to the given question: correspondence, semantic, verifiability, transparency, and plurality.

Operators vs Quantifiers

Edited by Max Köbel, David Rey

In this book, seven experts in logic and semantics examine reasons for using the intensional operator approach over the variable binding approach and vice versa. The volume features contributions from leading experts in the field that examine three questions—what exactly is at stake in a choice between the alternatives?: are there any principled reasons for deciding which approach to use in which case?: should we be purists and eliminate one approach completely in favour of the other? This book was originally published as a special issue of Inquiry.

Expected Experiences
The Predictive Mind in an Uncertain World

Edited by Tony Cheng, Ryoji Sato, Jakob Hohwy

Series: Routledge Studies in Contemporary Philosophy

This book focuses on predictive processing and expected experience. Predictive processing is the theory that the brain constantly minimizes the error of its predictions based on the sensory input it receives from the world. This process of prediction error minimization has numerous implications for different forms of conscious and perceptual experience. The chapters explore these implications and various phenomenon related to them. The contributors tackle issues related to precision estimation, sensory prediction, probabilistic perception, and postdiction, as well as role predictive processing plays in emotion, dreams, psychotic experience, body dysmorphia, and robotic minds.

Philosophy of Mind
50 Puzzles, Paradoxes, and Thought Experiments

Torin Alter, Amy Kind, Robert J. Howell

Series: Puzzles, Paradoxes, and Thought Experiments in Philosophy

Imaginative cases, or what might be called puzzles and other thought experiments, play a central role in philosophy of mind. The real world also furnishes philosophers with an ample supply of such puzzles. This volume collects fifty of the most important historical and contemporary cases in philosophy of mind and describes their significance. The authors divide them into five sections: consciousness and dualism, physicalist theories and the metaphysics of mind, content, intentionality, and representation—perception, imagination, and attention—and persons, personal identity, and the self.

Philosophy of Mental Disorder
An Ability-Based Approach

Sanja Dembić

Series: Routledge Studies in Contemporary Philosophy

This book offers an ability-based view of mental disorders. It develops a detailed analysis of the concept of inability that is relevant in the psychiatric and psychotherapeutic context. By drawing on the most recent literature on the concepts of ability, reasons and harm, it contends that an individual has a mental disorder if and only if they are—in the relevant sense—unable to respond adequately to their available reasons in their thinking, feeling or acting. The aim is not to offer just another conception of mental disorder, but to develop a systematic approach that incorporates insights from philosophy of psychiatry and adjacent philosophical disciplines.

Explanatory Optimism about the Hard Problem of Consciousness

Josh Weisberg

Explanatory Optimism about the Hard Problem of Consciousness argues that despite the worries of explanatory pessimists, consciousness can be fully explained in “easy” scientific terms. The widespread intuition that consciousness poses a hard problem is plausibly based on how consciousness appears to us in first-person access. The book offers a debunking argument to undercut the justificatory link between the first-person appearances and our hard problem intuitions.
Perception: The Basics

Bence Nanay
Series: The Basics

This book combines approaches from philosophy, psychology, and neuroscience in the study of perception. In addition to appealing to readers from all three of these disciplines, Perception: The Basics is a perfect introduction for students and general readers. Its interdisciplinary coverage of all aspects of perception does not require familiarity with either abstract philosophical concepts or neuroscientific knowledge. Besides addressing the classic questions of how perception works, the book highlights the intricate connections between perception and action and on perception that is not triggered by sensory input, like mental imagery, dreaming, and hallucination.

The Turing Test Argument

Bernardo Gonçalves
Series: Routledge Studies in Twentieth-Century Philosophy
This book departs from existing accounts of Turing’s imitation game and test by placing Turing’s proposal in its historical, social, and cultural context. It reconstructions a controversy in England, 1946-1952, over the cognitive capabilities of digital computers, which led Turing to propose his test. It argues that the Turing test is best understood not as a practical experiment, but as a thought experiment in the modern scientific tradition of Galileo.

Feminist Epistemology and Philosophy of Science
An Introduction

Sharon Crasnow, Kristen Intemann
Structured around 6 questions that have been offered by feminist epistemologists and philosophers of science: Who knows? What do we have knowledge of? How do we know? What don’t we know? Why does it matter? And How can we know better? The audience for the book is upper division undergraduates, but it will be useful as a foundation for graduate students and other philosophers who are seeking a general understanding of feminist work in these areas.

Phenomenology and QBism
New Approaches to Quantum Mechanics

Edited by Philipp Berghofer, Harald A. Wiltsche
Series: Routledge Studies in the Philosophy of Mathematics and Physics
This is the first book exclusively devoted to phenomenology and quantum mechanics. By emphasizing the role of the subject’s experiences, QBism exhibits several interesting parallels with phenomenology. This book elaborates whether and specifies how phenomenology could serve as the philosophical foundation of QBism. This objective is pursued from the perspective of QBists engaging with phenomenology as well as the perspective of phenomenologists engaging with QBism. These approaches enable us to realize a better understanding of quantum mechanics and the world we live in, achieve a better understanding of QBism, and introduce the phenomenological foundations of quantum mechanics.

A Philosophical Investigation

Joshua R. Sijuwade

Series: Routledge Studies in the Philosophy of Religion

This book explores and develops a new philosophical argument for the existence of God from metaphysics. Part one details the explanatory framework of the analysis, which is focused on introducing a new abductive methodology within metaphysics that provides a way for assessing the veracity of the Theism and the leading fundamental theories in contemporary metaphysics. The second part focuses on demonstrating how the central concepts and theories within contemporary metaphysics are best explained by the existence of God, and thus justify theism, over that of the competing theories within contemporary metaphysics.

Is It Wrong to Buy Sex?
A Debate

Holly Lawford-Smith, Angie Pepper

Series: Little Debates about Big Questions

Is it wrong for a man to buy sex from a woman? Lawford-Smith argues that commercial sex is quintessentially hierarchical sex, and it is wrong both to have and to perpetuate a market in, hierarchical sex. Pepper argues that men are permitted to buy sex from those women who freely choose to sell it. Important issues are at stake in these two positions, such as issues of gender equality and the rights of individuals. The two authors debate the ethical issues involved in the decision to buy sex, arguing passionately for very different conclusions, in a way that is lively, constructive, and sure to leave readers with a lot to think about.

Why do we produce it? How do we judge it? The arts that garnered the most theoretical attention during this time period were music, poetry, calligraphy, and painting, and the book considers the reasons why these four were privileged, addressing Chinese aesthetic discourse on its own terms and including more coverage of primary sources than any other English-language book on the subject.

What Makes Life Meaningful?
A Debate

Thaddeus Metz, Joshua W. Seachris
Series: Little Debates about Big Questions

Can human life be meaningful? What does talk about life’s meaning even mean? What is God’s role, if any, in a meaningful life? These three questions frame this one-of-a-kind debate between two philosophers who have spent most of their professional lives thinking and writing about the topic of life’s meaning. In this wide-ranging scholarly conversation, Professors Thaddeus Metz and Joshua Seachris develop and defend their own unique answers to these questions, while responding to each other’s objections in a lively dialogue format.

Rationality in Context
Unstable Virtues in an Uncertain World

Steven Bland
Series: Routledge Studies in Epistemology

This book uses the psychological literature on rationality to weigh in on the recent debate between virtue epistemologists and epistemic situationalists. The author provides a reading of the empirical literature that implies that interactions between epistemic agents and their social, cognitive, and institutional environments are the fundamental drivers of both rational and irrational behaviour. An interactionist framework motivated by this insight conceives of epistemic virtues and vices as both responsive to and responsible for the environments in which they’re manifested and cultivated.

What Do We Owe Other Animals?
A Debate

Bob Fischer, Anja Jauernig
Series: Little Debates about Big Questions

Philosophers Bob Fischer and Anja Jauernig agree that human society often treats animals in indefensible ways and that all animals have moral worth; they disagree on whether that worth is equal to that of humans. In What Do We Owe Other Animals?: A Debate, Fischer and Jauernig square off over this central argument in animal ethics. Jauernig defends the view that all living beings are of equal moral worth and are owed compassion, on account of which we are also obligated to adopt a vegan diet. Fischer denies that we have an obligation to become vegans, and argues for the position that humans morally matter more than all other living creatures.

Why Not Capitalism?
2ND EDITION
Why Not Capitalism?
Jason Brennan

Brennan attacks this widely held belief, arguing that capitalism would remain the best system even if we were morally perfect. Clearly, engagingly, and at times provocatively written, Why Not Capitalism? will cause readers of all political persuasions to re-evaluate where they stand on economics. In this expanded 2nd Edition, Brennan responds to his critics throughout the book and provides two new, final chapters. One argues against egalitarianism in a capitalist utopia. The other shows that we don’t need to be angels in an anarchic utopia, but merely decent people who are willing to adhere to four underdemanding moral principles.

Olli-Pekka Vainio

This book considers how certainty and faith are related in Christian faith. The book also addresses some less discussed arguments that threaten the certainty of faith and offers an account of faith as cognitive practice. British Methodist Revivalism and the Eclipse of Ecclesiology
James E. Pedlar
Series: Routledge Methodist Studies Series
Revivalism was one of the main causes of division in nineteenth-century British Methodism, but the role of revivalist theology in these splits has received scant scholarly attention. In this book, James E. Pedlar demonstrates how the revivalist variant of Methodist spirituality and theology empowered its adherents and helped foster new movements, even as it undermined the Spirit’s work through the structures of the church. Pedlar shows that these theological differences must be considered, alongside social and political factors, in any well-rounded assessment of the division and eventual reunification of British Methodism.

Critics Not Caretakers
Redescribing the Public Study of Religion

Russell T. McCutcheon

The essays collected together in Critics Not Caretakers argue that the study of religion must be rethought as an ordinary aspect of social, historical existence, a stance that makes the scholar of religion a critic of cultural and historical practices rather than a caretaker of religious tradition or a font of timeless wisdom and deep meaning. This new edition includes new introductory commentaries across all of the chapters to demonstrate how little the field has changed since the volume was first published in 2001. This book continues to provide a viable alternative for those wanting to take a more critical approach to the study of religion.

American Evangelicals for Trump

Dominion, Spiritual Warfare, and the End Times

André Gagné

This book introduces the American Evangelical movement and the role it played in the support of Donald Trump. Specifically, it focuses on the Neocharismatic-Pentecostal (NCP) leaders, their beliefs, and their political strategies. Studying Religion
An Introduction

Russell McCutcheon

Studying Religion clearly explains the methods and theories employed in the academic study of religion by tackling the problem of how scholars define and then study religion. This edition includes a new final chapter, Classification Matters, which presents a collection of contemporary instances where different approaches to defining and studying religion make it possible to study other issues of contemporary relevance, including those involving gender, race, and the rights of indigenous peoples. This book remains invaluable to all students of religious studies—whether in the introductory class or as an example of an alternative way of approaching the field.

Theology and the University

Edited by Fáinche Ryan, Dirk Ansorge, Josef Quitterer

It considers how theology has been marginalized in the academy and in public life, arguing that doing so has serious repercussions for the integrity of the academic study of religion. It is a must read for all researchers of theology, as well as anyone interested in the role of the humanities more broadly.
